ERNESTO VENTÓS S.A. CENTENARY

It is neither ordinary nor commonplace for a project to keep going for over a hundred years. It is proof of its solidity and sense, showing that it is well executed and has overcome the obstacles that time has placed in its path.

If a project is to survive and grow over a hundred years, it needs people who love it, believe in it, promote it, and defend it day after day. Those people are the company's soul; they give it life and bestow its unique character upon it.

Our company began with Ernest Ventós Casadevall's dream, ambition and hard work. Fortunately for us, he liked to put his thoughts down on paper. His initial trials and triumphs are therefore well documented. Reading them now, we realise that although the company was a fragile starter, it had all the energy and class of an outstanding person behind it. When its founder died prematurely, he left his project as a robust seed that would survive even war.

His son, Ernest Ventós Ravetllat, had to step in earlier than expected to take his father's ideas forward. He was an exceptional man who brought the gift of elegance to everything he did. With an honest spirit, effort, and a great business vision, Mr Ventós continued his father's work and created a solid, strong and prestigious company. He was its body and soul for over 60 years.

When I was fortunate enough to start working with him 30 years ago, I learned that ethics and honour are fundamental principles on which to develop and run a business. Together with Alex Ventós, we embarked upon a new phase replete with challenges, and we can proudly say today that the passage of time has galvanised our company and that the highest values we inherited from Mr Ventós are not material but rather his spirit, humanity and trust in good workmanship.

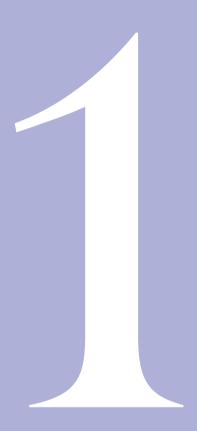

Our company started out as a family business, and the Ventós family is essential to it on many levels. I am honoured to be at the head of this company in its centenary year. I am moved and grateful to be here, to have been involved in developing this project and, most of all, for the trust that the Ventós family has placed in me over three generations. This book clearly shows that the family has kept the company together.

However, it is not only the passage of time that has made us older and brought us to where we are. I believe that the people who have worked with enthusiasm, effort and have given part of their life and commitment to Ernesto Ventós S.A. have also made this magnificent company what it is today. This book is testament both to the one hundred years of our history and to the coming one hundred, which we will also celebrate if we are able to uphold Ernest Ventós' spirit.

Many thanks to all those who have contributed.

Jordi Calonge

CEO of Ernesto Ventós S.A.

1916 - 1922 THE ORIGINS

The story of Ernesto Ventós S.A. dates back to 1916, when Ernest Ventós Casadevall founded an essence distillery.

Born in Barcelona in 1894 to a middle-class family, Ernest Ventós Casadevall was the oldest of four sons. He became the man of the family on his father's premature death when Ernest was a boy.

His first job was as a bank clerk at Crédit Lyonnais, which gave him a fixed income and a secure position. In 1915, the year when he began planning what would later become Ernesto Ventós S.A., he was juggling his role at the bank with work as an agent for essence companies.

This sideline began to take up ever more of his time, opening up new and more exciting career prospects. It was then that the essence sector became more important, with the support of his brother Antoni who had a representative of Ylang Ylang in the Philippines.

Days of intense work, business, and profit.

"Neroly sous fleurs, Musc ambrette..."

The Givaudan representative, young Barrel, has arrived: good lad, good firm, good prospects. Tomorrow he departs. I have spent these days visiting clients on foot and by car. 15,000 pesetas. Good business.

In 1916 he set up his own company to distil Spanish essences with the legal structure of a limited partnership, which later became an individual company in 1920.

Emest Ventós Casadevall forged business relations with the company Givaudan in 1916. The picture shows Xavier Givaudan and other members of the Swiss company on a trip to Barcelona. The correspondence between Ernest Ventós Casadevall and his wife Manuela Ravetllat during his early business trips tell us a great deal about his prolific business dealings during those initial years. He went frequently to Madrid, Valencia, Murcia, Seville and elsewhere, forging relations with some of the sector's big names such as Adrián, Maluquer and Myrurgia, and Swiss company Givaudan.

THYME

Ernest Ventós Casadevall worked with good quality raw materials that he sourced from Valencia, Murcia, Andalusia and Castile: spike lavender, rosemary, thyme, eucalyptus, lemon and orange. He also started fractional distillation, obtaining natural thymol from thyme and eucalyptol from eucalyptus.

Besides work, Ernest Ventós Casadevall had two main interests: painting and politics.

As a landscape painter he exhibited works at the Belles Arts in 1910, 1911 and 1920, and at the art exhibition of the Círculo Artístico de Barcelona in 1915. It is a little known fact that he designed the company's first labels himself.

His political career got off the ground in the 1920s and 1930s when he became a delegate of the government commissioner to wind up the Barcelona International Exposition of 1929. On 12 April 1931, he was elected to be councillor and deputy mayor of Barcelona City Council, where he played a particularly important role on the Museums Board.

He was head of procurement and later head of finance at the City Council, as well as head of the minority left-wing group Esquerra. On 30 January 1933, Ernest Ventós Casadevall died of lung disease when he was only 39. His death was a great loss. The council received telegrams and condolences from other councils and citizen groups, and the turnout for his funeral was huge, as can be seen from the photos taken by press photographer Carlos Pérez de Rozas.

In both business and politics, Ernest Ventós Casadevall had earned the respect and esteem of his friends, colleagues and customers, who remembered him as an intelligent, honest and very hard-working man.

On 25 June 1933, the Plaça del Centre in between the Barcelona neighbourhoods of Sants and Les Corts was renamed Plaça d'Ernest Ventós in homage to him. Members of the City Council and a large audience attended the official ceremony. Francesc Macià, president of the regional government of Catalonia (the Generalitat), Lluís Companys, then minister of the Spanish government and future successor of Macià, and Dr Jaume Aiguader, mayor of Barcelona, were all visitors to the deceased's family - his widow, Manuela Ravetllat, and their three children Ernest, Núria and Raquel.

In September of the same year Manuela Ravetllat also passed away, leaving the three children orphaned. Manuela had entrusted the children's care to her brother Josep Ravetllat and sister-in-law Montserrat Bertrana. The couple and their own two sons Jordi and Ernest moved out of their home in Sant Boi de Llobregat and into the house on Carrer Descatllar.

When civil war broke out they left Sants for the town of Argentona to live in the house they had inherited from their parents. They were difficult times of increasing scarcity, and war forced Josep Ravetllat to flee Spain, first to France and then to Switzerland. It therefore fell to Montserrat to take charge of the family, with the help of her nephew Ernest Ventós Ravetllat.

Chapter 3

1939-1959 THE DEVELOPMENT

After the war, the Ventós and Ravetllat families went back to Barcelona. The house and essence workshop on Carrer Descatllar had been severely damaged during the war and all that was left were a few bottles.

In 1942 he married Maria Omedes Calonja, who he had met in Argentona. In the early years of their marriage the couple lived in the house on Carrer Descatllar, from where they continued running the essence business. They would have eight children.

Despite the numerous difficulties entailed by the autarchic economic policy in post-war Spain, Ernest Ventós Ravetllat found a way to enter business relations with foreign customers and suppliers and import essential oils for his company. He first became an agent for Robertet from Grasse (France). The company used raw materials to make perfumes and Ernest Ventós Ravetllat built not only a significant business relationship but also a friendship with them. He was their agent for 36 years, until Robertet opened a subsidiary in Spain.

His friendship with perfumer Arturo Jordi Pey was definitive in the next phase of his life: Jordi Pey had been the agent for Firmenich in Spain since 1933, a position that Ernest Ventós would later take over from him.

In the mid-twentieth century, Firmenich was already one of the world's leading perfumery companies. When civil war broke out, Jordi Pey had gone to Geneva where he stayed until the conflict ended, making perfume compositions and developing his creative talent. After the war he joined Firmenich as a perfumer in Geneva, and to replace him as their agent in Spain he recommended Ernest Ventós Ravetllat. From 1948 onwards, therefore. Mr Ventós was in charge of consolidating the sale of Firmenich's products in Spain.

He was soon known for the skills that would make him a reference point in the industry. Ventós was clever, honest and upstanding, with a far-reaching business vision and instinct. In 1952 he joined the Board of Directors to set up an Independent Trade Union for the Perfume and Related Industries. This group paved the way for perfumery to be recognised as a distinct sector to the chemical industries in the legal framework of the Spanish Trade Union Organisation (the 'Sindicato Vertical'). It was also the seed of the future National Association of Perfumery and Cosmetics (STANPA), which remains to this day the trade union for companies that manufacture and distribute perfumes and cosmetics in Spain.

Despite the constraints of dictatorship, in the 1950s Ernest Ventós Ravetllat was able to achieve his exporting ambition, making an annual average of 700,000 pesetas, which was no small sum at the time.

His business is described in a document from 1956 which sets out the company situation at that time:

Mr Ernesto Ventós Ravetllat, Director-Owner of the essence distillation company that bears his name and was constituted in the year 1916 to distil essences from Spain and manufacture essences for indoor and outdoor use, perfumery, soap-making, etc. The company has 12 permanent employees and a further 25 temporary workers for distillation in the field, with capital of three million pesetas. Its annual turnover is approximately twelve million pesetas.

In 1958, as the City Council was planning to extend the nearby Avinguda de Madrid, Mr Ventós Ravetllat agreed to transfer his property on Carrer Descatllar to the Council in exchange for the remaining part of the same street so that he could build adjoining units for the factory.

1959-1985 THE CONSOLIDATION

The 1960s was marked by the release in Spain of two films by the company Firmenich. As the agent for the Swiss firm, Ernest Ventós Ravetllat was in charge of all the organising.

PATCHOULI

In 1961, the documentary Síntesis ('Synthesis') was released, and in 1968, during Perfumes and Cosmetics Week in Barcelona, the second documentary premiered - La materia y el espíritu ('Matter and spirit'), which had a significant impact on the perfumes and aromas industry.

Robert Firmenich arriving at Barcelona airport for the release of the film La materia y el espíritu. He was met by Emest Ventós Ravetllat and Arturo Jordi Pey (1968).

In December 1973, Ernesto Ventós went from being an individual company dealing in essences to become Ernesto Ventós, Sociedad Anónima (a limited company), based at Avinguda de Madrid, 211-213, Barcelona. The company's mission was to 'extract, manufacture, sell, promote and distribute essences and chemicals'.

Over the course of the 1970s and 1980s, the company consolidated its position as the agent for Firmenich and Robertet, which made it a key player in fragrance and aroma distribution.

PATCHOULI

Throughout his career, Ernest Ventós Ravetllat passed on his defining personal values: integrity, ethics, helping people, humanity, discretion, trust, perseverance at work, and effort.

I have been living the adventure of essences from a very early age.

When I was just 10, I would watch my father making thymol and eucalyptol in a small still.

Later, shortly after the Spanish civil war, almost 50 years ago, I entered the wonderful world of distilling in Spain. I remember those nights in the villages of the central Spanish plateau, enveloped by the aroma of spike lavender and clean air, under stars that shine more brightly. It is very cold there, but one is surrounded by the warmth of the hardy, noble countryfolk.

Working with Firmenich Spain I discovered a new world, in which the simplified essences that we dealt in were a small part of our business. It was there that I discovered research and the efforts it requires, the organisation, the perfumers' art of creation and the flavourists with their fantasy and inspiration, the will to succeed and a company where, in addition to all these values, there was one that I believe to be fundamental: the human value, the feeling of friendship and understanding, of personal affection, trust and honourability.

I spent many years there and knew three generations of Firmenich owners, with the pride of being a friend to each generation.

1985-2013

THE EXPANSION

The year 1985 marked a turning point in the history of Ernesto Ventós S.A. Mr Ventós sold his business to Swiss firm Firmenich, which was seeking a base in Spain to harness the potential of the country joining the European Economic Community.

Stage one of Jordi Calonge's business strategy was to take on new people to build a young team that could take the company forward. The first new recruit was Máximo Mate as warehouse manager, a position he still holds today. The goal was to build a commercial and customer service structure to operate on the domestic market of raw materials for fragrances and aromas.

EVSA's first offices were on the sixth floor of Avinguda de Madrid, 211-213. The warehouse was located in a nearby underground car park on Carrer Guitard at the intersection with Carrer Robrenyo, in Barcelona. The quantity of products distributed ranged from 200 to 400 kilos a day.

During that decade, the number of products in the catalogue went up to 13, of which 6 were natural (patchouli, lemon, menthol, sandalwood, eucalyptus and orange) and 7 synthetic (hedione®, synthetic citral, cis-3-hexenol, benzyl acetate, aldehyde C-14 and coumarin). Natural products accounted for 30% of the turnover and synthetic products 70%.

The new era had got off to a good start and the company was growing steadily. It soon needed more staff and more space for them to work in as they had outgrown the premises on Avinguda de Madrid. Therefore, in 1988 the company bought a plot of land on the Femades industrial estate in Cornellà.

In July 1990, EVSA moved to its new premises in Cornellà, where sales, management and warehousing were centralised. Other team members who joined in that period and are still with the company are Ernest Costa (finance department), Gustavo Martín (whose first job was in the warehouse), and Gemma Parramon (quality control).

The first cargo lift was bought for the warehouse and the first gas chromatograph for the laboratory.

The Sant Just warehouse was split into several areas: a refrigeration zone to keep essences in optimal conditions, an inflammables area, repackaging, laboratory, reception and the Ventós dispatch area. Tanks with a 35,000 litres capacity were also built. In March 2001, with the works complete, the company moved its headquarters from Cornellà to Sant Just.

That same year, EVSA opened its first overseas subsidiary, Ventós do Brasil in Sao Paulo. By then exports accounted for 65% of turnover, 25% of which went to Latin America. A logistics platform was thus created to meet demand in that region as quickly as possible. In the coming years the company continued to expand overseas, opening offices and warehouses in China and Mexico in 2011 and acquiring French company Prodasynth, an aroma chemicals manufacturer in 2013.

LIME

Construction of the new building Ventós in Sant Just Desvem (2007). Over the first decade of the 21st century, staff numbers continued to grow in line with turnover and the catalogue. EVSA distributed products from the world's leading companies in the sector: IFF, BASF, PFW, PT INDESSO, NIPPON ZEON, SYNAROME, PCAS, FIRMENICH, MIGUEL PARRA, KAO, HINDUSTAN POLYAMIDES, DSM, BALLER, PQA, MILTITZ, RARO'S, KELKAR, and more.

Yet again it was outgrowing its premises so a new building was built next door, currently the Ventós head offices, on Carretera Reial in Sant Just Desvern. The building was inaugurated in 2008. As growth continued however, a further two warehouses had to be built near the headquarters.

2013-2016

PRESENT AND FUTURE CHALLENGES

In 2013, EVSA bought company Myrurgia's former warehouses in Sant Just Desvern and renovated and refurbished them to make them into the modern automated warehouse it is today.

Divided into various areas to store and process products, the warehouse covers 30,000m2 and has the capacity for over four thousand pallets. The new automated facilities were inaugurated in 2014.

All goods that arrive daily at Ventós go through reception and quality control. The laboratory carries out physical and chemical, chromatographic and organoleptic analyses. Both the original samples and the goods received are analysed to ensure quality and traceability.

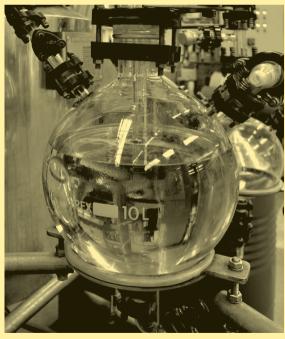

The natural product facility was another step forward for Ventós. In 2010 it had bought a warehouse on Carrer Monturiol in Sant Just, behind the current Ventós headquarters, to store flammable products. In 2015, work began to transform the old warehouse into a distillation plant for natural products. It is now equipped with cutting-edge technology and combines traditional and molecular distillation, using only top quality products with high added value.

From its headquarters in Sant Just Desvern, Ventós leads the sector of raw materials for fragrances and aromas. The ultimate mission of its 180-strong team including HQ and the regional offices in Brazil, China, Mexico and France, is still to provide a service, working together to carry on the dream that Ernest Ventós Casadevall brought to life in 1916.

Acknowledgements

It would not have been possible to tell the Ernesto Ventós story without the involvement of all those who have close ties to the company.

We would especially like to thank the members of the third and fourth generation of the Ventós family for the contributions and documentation they provided, which have given us an insight into Ernest Ventós' personal and professional lifes:

Ernesto Ventós Omedes, María Ventós Omedes, Marta Ventós Omedes, Isabel Ventós Omedes, Gloria Ventós Omedes, Lluís Ventós Omedes, Alex Ventós Omedes, Carlos Ventós Omedes, Inés Ventós Soler-Cabot and Lluís Ventós Lario.

We would also like to express our gratitude for the accounts given by Ernest Ravetllat, who lived with Ernest Ventós Ravetllat during the tough years of war. To Maria Masriera, who has been with the company as executive secretary for her whole working life.

With thanks to Esteban Rodés Monegal for the documentation he provided.

To the team that works every day at Ventós: thank you for the commitment.

To our friends, customers, suppliers, sector professionals... thank you for the ongoing support and trust in us for all these years.
